line beetween that city and Pinsk. I their positions on the heights to th southeast of the city the Russians will be able to resist obstinately.

The outstanding feature of military conditions in the north is that the fortress of Dvinsk and the entire Dvina River front are still held by the Czar's troops. A severe battle is raging to the westward of Dvinsk, where the Germans have brought up their heavy artillery. While the Russians hold their Dyina position the entire German left wing is held in check, a situation which prevents rapid advance by the Teutonic center.
